Technical Visit by Host

Technical Visit: Badan Informasi Geospasial (BIG) Office

Badan Informasi Geospasial (Geospatial Information Agency) is formerly known as Badan Koordinasi Survey dan Pemetaan Nasional (National Coordinator for Survey and Mapping Agency). BIG is primarily responsible for managing geospatial information in Indonesia. BIG also plays a crucial role in implementing the One Map Policy, to standardize the maps and the references to ensure consistency in spatial data for national development.

BIG is located in Cibinong, West Java (6° 29' 27.79" S. 106° 50' 56.08" E) within the Cibinong Science Center, a key area for research and development. BIG is surrounded by lush greenery and small lakes, creating a peaceful and scenic environment. At BIG, there are four Continuously Operating Reference Stations (CORS) stations, namely: BAKO, CIBG, BAK1 and SBIG. These CORS Stations continuously collect satellite data like GPS, GLONASS, and Galileo, serving as reliable reference points for precise geodetic positioning. The data is useful in various fields, including surveying, meteorology, GIS, and space weather monitoring.

A glimpse of information about these CORS Stations:

1. BAKO is the oldest established CORS station in Indonesia,
2. CIBG is owned by REGINA-France; and
3. SBIG was constructed through a collaboration between BIG and the German Research Centre for Geosciences (GFZ) for scientific research purposes

Site Visits:

1: Mangrove Ecotourism Center “Taman Wisata Alam Mangrove Angke Kapuk”

Taman Wisata Alam Mangrove Angke Kapuk is in North Jakarta, located within the Pantai Indah Kapuk (PIK) area. This urban mangrove conservation area offers a pristine and serene natural retreat amidst the city, serving as an ecological sanctuary with diverse wildlife. The park spans several hectares of protected mangrove forest, providing a tranquil environment rich in biodiversity. It is home to various bird species, reptiles, and fish, making it a prime destination for nature enthusiasts and birdwatchers. Visitors can explore the peaceful mangrove ecosystem via walking trails and enjoy scenic waterway views.

Important Note: As a protected area, strict guidelines are in place to preserve the mangrove ecosystem. Visitors must avoid littering, damaging plants, or disturbing wildlife.

For more info, please visit: <https://jakartamangrove.id>

2: Kota Tua Jakarta (Old Town of Jakarta “Batavian en Omstreken”)

Kota Tua is also known as Old Town of Jakarta or the original name was Batavia. The Dutch founded it in the 17th century as a key port on the spice route through Southeast Asia and it became one of the main cities for the Dutch East India Company.

What is left today are the remnants of the original walled city built during that period, and the buildings left standing are stark reminders of the Dutch influence of early Jakarta. Kota Tua sparks colonial architecture of the Dutch influence such as the streets and the buildings.

As you wander around Kota Tua, you will be captivated by the large pillared building of Dutch designs that have been converted into Museums today. The streets and canals boast buildings and structures dating back to colonial times.

There are museums clustered around the Kota Tua area. The Jakarta History Museum is the most prominent and gives you a real feel for the history of Batavia. There is also a Maritime Museum, a Bank Museum and even a Wayang Museum. Photography is generally allowed, but museum-specific rules should be checked.

Hygiene

Water Safety:

In most parts of Indonesia, drinking tap water directly is prohibited since it is not drinkable, but it is still safe to use tap water to brush your teeth. It is advisable to drink bottled water.

Food Safety:

- Hand Hygiene: Wash your hands regularly and use hand sanitizer to reduce the risk of illness.
- Food Guidelines: When purchasing food from markets, choose fruits that can be peeled or washed with bottled water. Ensure meat, especially chicken, is thoroughly cooked. If you are not accustomed to spicy food, limit your consumption.
- Seafood Caution: If you are not near the coast, it is advisable to be cautious with seafood as it may not always be fresh. Please be mindful of the restaurant's offerings if you have seafood allergies.

Animal Safety:

Avoid Contact with Animals: While Bogor does not have a significant presence of stray animals, avoid feeding or approaching any animals you may encounter.

Additional Information
